What is Exclusion?

Exclusion is a humane and life-oriented approach to pest control. Techniques are applied to remove intrusive animals and prevent future use of your building or yard by wildlife. Rather than trap and relocate animals, which is illegal and can expose wildlife to diseases and territorial conflicts, AWES technicians identify and remove the substances that originally attracted the animal. This solution motivates the animal to leave the property and reduces the likelihood of other animals getting in.

Why Do I Need an Exclusion Service?

Wildlife Exclusion is a specialized profession much like a plumber or an electrician. With human development expanding, the native habitats of many species are being encroached upon. This limitation of natural resources is causing wildlife to venture into human territory, seeking food and space. Many homes and businesses are not designed to sufficiently guard against the attraction of such wildlife. Your property may be susceptible to entry by one or more species of wildlife. An evaluation by an AWES technician will help.

Exclusion Techniques

An initial property inspection is necessary to evaluate the situation and determine the status of wildlife residents. Technicians will identify potential points of entry, as well as any substances that may attract animals. A custom exclusion strategy will then be designed to remove wildlife and prevent future invasions. Their techniques may include:

- Eliminating accessibility to food and garbage sources
- Sealing or screening entrances into the building
- Predator scent applications

Technicians will help you achieve safe, effective and long-term alternatives to control your wildlife problem.

**We do not trap or relocate wildlife. This is illegal in California.*
